GENERAL ANESTHESIA

We have a protocol with the Hospital, where we can work under General Anesthesia procedure. C.E.R.O. Team is very coordinated with the Hospital Team and Facilities, and this is another good solution to deal with a wider range of patients and treatments.

GENERAL ANESTHESIA FOR DENTAL SURGERY

In Dentistry's current state, and specifically when it comes to Oral Surgery, we can, as we speak, carry out our procedures with a level of pain and discomfort almost close to zero or, in a worst-case scenario, confined within the permissible and tolerable limits for our patients.

In the other hand, we have situations in which local anesthesia, the conscious and/or chemical sedation, are not sufficient for us to operate under safe, effective and efficient conditions.

We talk about the following situations:

- Patients with pathophysiological conditions who need a stricter control (monitoring) by the medical team, carried out by both surgeons and anesthesiologists.
- Patients who struggle to keep their mouth open during the required period to carry out their specific treatment.
- Patients with phobias, fears and traumatic past experiences, who doesn't gather the set of premises which allow the medical team to carry out their work under the best conditions possible.
- More complex and extensive surgeries which demand their procedures to be carried under the scope of general anesthesia, such as the zygomatic implant surgery.
